Tommy is a big boy! He is the heaviest of all the carvings.

An Adirondack fisherman said, "If you have ever caught one, they are a thrill and an absolute gem to the eye. In my experience, no other fish that you try to catch feels like you are hunting with a fishing rod and line. They are tricky, and thus a true challenge. It sure is a splendid feeling catching one."

BROOK TROUT

Brook Trout are not trout at all. They are "troutlike" and actually a char. These fish are specialized to live in cold climates. The brook trout inhabit large lakes and tiny mountain streams, but they require cold, clean, high oxygenated water. They prefer water temperatures between 34-72F degrees.
